What is the difference between Medicare and Medicaid?

Medicare is health insurance for those over age 65 and the disabled. After a three-day hospital stay, Medicare completely covers days 1–20 of skilled nursing with co-pays of $209.50 for days 21–100 (2025). Medicare replacements (HMO or PPO) have similar, but not the same, rules.

Once rehabilitation ends, typically well before 100 days, Medicaid may help pay for long-term care at home, in an assisted living facility, or in the nursing home. In order to qualify for Medicaid, the applicant must pass a strict test looking at the applicant's income and assets. When the patient is in a nursing home, now may be the time to get legal assistance, protect assets, and apply for Medicaid.
